EASTERN KENTUCKY State teachers College

Richmond, Kentucky

Published by the Students of EASTERN KENTUCKY STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

JAMES HART Editor

ELMER DOUGLAS Business Manager

The honorable Dr. Nocl B. Cuff, who, in harmony with the traditions of this class of '38 did follow them through four years of intensive study into the land of Education, the department of which he is the head, and taught them righteous thoughts as a loyal and helpful friend. And likewise the students of Eastern Kentucky State College have learned to appreciate him as a sincere friend, a constructive critic, an idealist who has labored painstakingly through the medium of a sponsorship to develop for them the tools of an outstanding culture. His name commands respect in the field of his chosen career; he is the author of text books, and the psychology of education is the minor practice of his life, for it is the second nature of this man to think in terms of objective tests. Thus he has rendered a service to the educators of the nation that cannot be denied, and to the state a service which the youth of today may look upon as highly idealistic, and to the youth of the college, he gave the quality of a vast patience for which they can be justly proud. In recognition of this splendid service to the nation of education, to the state of education, and to the students of education, the Milestone does itself honor in dedicating this volume to him.

Dr. Noel B. Cuff

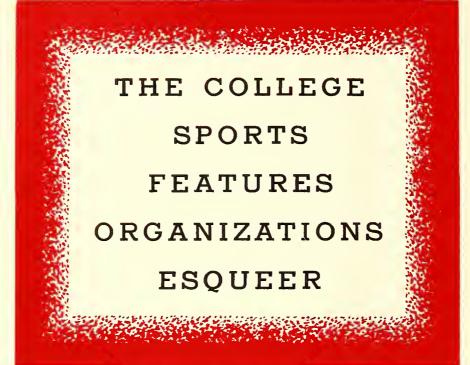

Because

Of her winning personality, her charm of manner, the warmth of her smile and her genuine thoughtfulness, we honor this gentlewoman, Mrs. H. L. Donovan, the wife of our president.

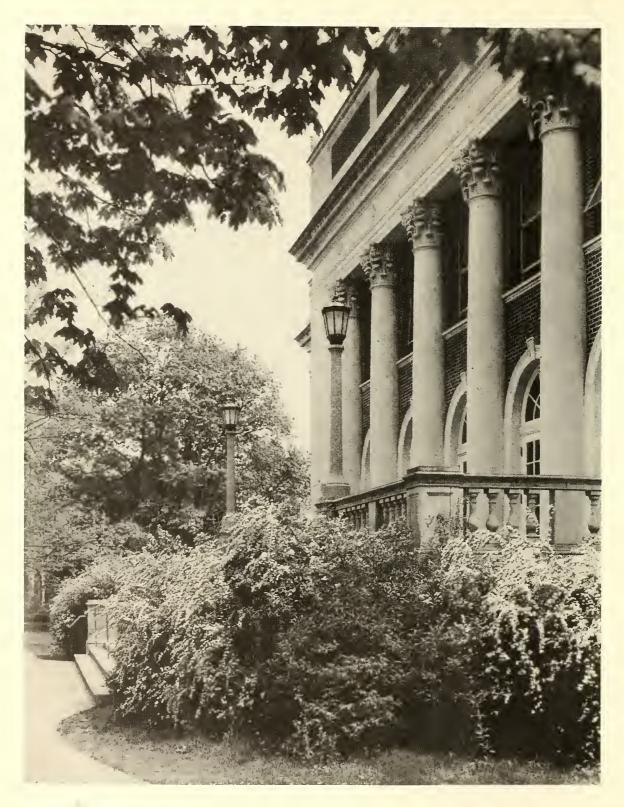

FOREWORD

So that the memories of Eastern shall not fade, we give you this MILESTONE, a record of the year 1937-1938, in printer's ink, recounted colorfully, informally, and accurately in all its varied aspects.

THE COLLEGE

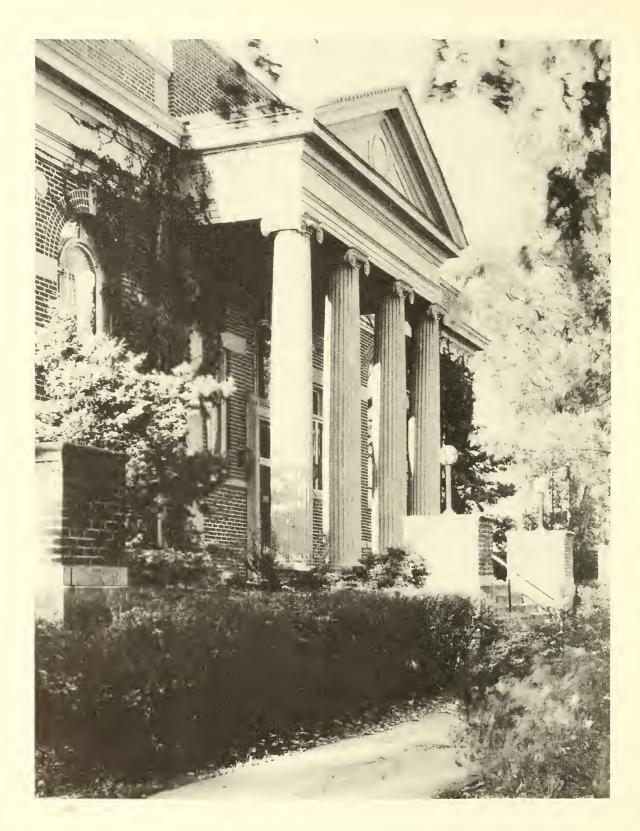

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

THE PRESIDENT

It was a great honor to Eastern when Dr. H. L. Donovan was elected President of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools this year. This in itself will create a great interest in Eastern. We congratulate and honor you, President Donovan.

CRABBE LIBRARY

DEAN OF THE COLLEGE

In Dr. William C. Jones Eastern has found a loyal and helpful friend. The students have learned to appreciate him as a sincere and constructive critic who has labored painstakingly through the medium of the student to develop for them the tools which they will use to carry out their life's work.

SPORTS

Athletics at Eastern have grown by leaps and bounds during the past three years and now Eastern stands in the limelight of athletics of the state. Remember some four or five years ago the status of athletics here at Eastern? Our school was regarded as a mere "breezer" for our foes in and out of state and we were scoffed at when we mentioned our teams to persons from other schools, especially our rivals.

Now the picture is entirely different. Immediately after Rome Rankin took over the head coach position, a new spirit seemed to envelop the campus and everyone began to take a new life as far as athletics were concerned. Teams began to improve steadily until now Eastern is one of the most feared aggregations in the state.

In the last three years Eastern athletics have won many places in the sun. Several have been chosen on the all State teams and many have been given national recognition. Eastern has won seventy percent of athletic contests during the past three years, a record any school would be proud to boast of.

With the continued splendid co-operation of the student body and alumni, athletics will continue to progress and gain unprecedented heights.

STATE MEET HERE

Maroons Open With Murray Thoroughbreds

September, with the bite of chill in the air, brought the nostalgic recognition of "football weather" and the call of Coach Rankin to which thirty husky athletes responded for gridiron practice.

The boys began work three weeks before school began and by September 20, were in tip-top shape to begin one of the most glamorous, successful seasons in the gridiron history of the school.

When the smoke had all cleared at the end of the season the Big Maroons had won five contests, lost two, and tied one. Any team would be proud to have such a season.

The Big Reds reached their greatest height when on November 13 they completely outfought and outgained the Union Bulldogs to take the Homecoming Tilt by a score of 14 to 0. The Rankinmen looked good enough that day to engage any aggregation that would care to engage them.

Eastern had several outstanding performers this year. Bob Hatton, 6'4", 214 pound gridster was a unanimous choice for all state honors and selected on the Little All-American team. Captain Roy King, Harold Everling, Bill Hagood, Carl Kemp, and John Killen were all given honorable mention on several all state selections.

Eastern had a team that everyone should be proud of and prospects look even brighter for next year.

DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

Chas. T. Hughes deserves much credit for the most efficient manner in which the athletic department has been managed this year. "Turkey," as he is called by his friends and he certainly has a host of them, took over the reins of athletics in the absence of Mr. T. E. McDonough, who is doing graduate work at the University of Louisiana.

There has never been a person connected with Eastern in any way who has done more for the school and who has more loyalty and untiring devotion than does "Turkey" Hughes and he has demonstrated it in many ways.

No higher tribute could be paid a man than to say he has given unreservedly to his task and has done his task in the best way it could have been done.

Rankin

SAMUELS

Coach Rome Rankin came to Eastern in 1935 from Glenwood High School, New Boston, Ohio, with one of the most impressive records of any coach in the country. He took up here where he left off at New Boston and has given Eastern athletics a place in the sun. He is an untiring worker and one who knows the game from begining to end.

He is a gentleman of the first calibre and has had a fine influence on the athletes who have played for him. He is one who will stick by his boys through thick and thin. The boys have learned to like him and to have faith in him and it is only with this type of mutual understanding can good teams be had. Assistant Coach Tom Samuels came to Eastern when Chas. T. Hughes was head coach and then remained as assistant to Coach Rankin. Coach Samuels was a star lineman on the Michigan University eleven in 1930, 31, and 32. He was an all Big Ten choice two years straight and was often mentioned as an all-American lineman.

He is regarded as one of the best line coaches in the state. His defensive record will speak for itself. His teams have been scored on less frequently than prohably any other team in the state.

Capt. R. King, Tackle

KING: Came to college to play basketball, but developed into one of the greatest gridsters to ever wear the Maroon and White. King is a powerful tackler and a hard blocker.

H. Fulkerson, Tackle

FULKERSON: The hardest working and most conscientious man on the squad and one who really got results from his efforts. Not many plays succeeded over "Piney's" tackle.

B. Byar, Center

BYAR: Eastern's center for two years and one of the best in the game. He was a bright spot at backing up the line and was a fierce hard blocker and tackler. Also a fine passer from center.

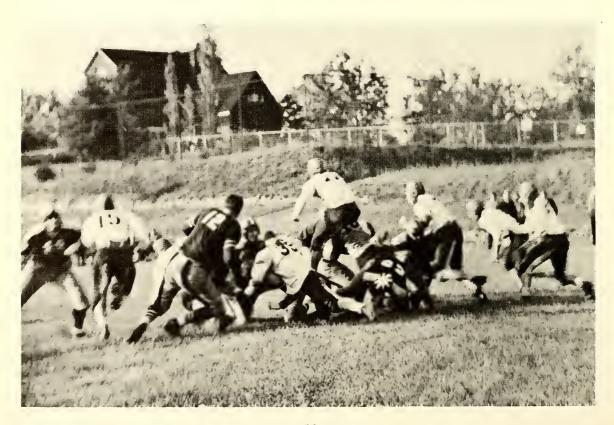

J. Cummins, Tackle

R. D. Lacy, Center

J. Killen, Half

CUMMINS: Although he was the "old man of the team" he was by far the least inactive. He has had much football experience and knows when and how to do "it." A fine place kicker. LACY: Did most of the backing up of the line for the Maroons and rarely ever missed a tackle once within striking distance. Fast and powerfully built. A great passer from center. KILLEN: Probably the fastest man on the team and could really zip off the yardage once past the line of scrimmage. A fine play diagnoser and a good defensive man against passes.

J. Jenkins, End

H. Everling, Quarter

E. McConnell, End

JENKINS: An all-around man on the gridiron. He did much of the kicking for the Maroons. Also did much of the pass receiving and did some running. He is also a fine blocker. Knows his football from a to z.

FARRIS: A never dying fighter and a willing winner. He was one of the best defensive and best blockers on the Maroon squad. Fast and could diagnose plays. EVERLING: A smart quarterback, who knew what plays to call with the situation. He is a deceptive runner, and is off once he is in the open. Was given much mention for an all State berth.

HATTON: Eastern's all State end and all Little America end. He is especially adapted to eatching passes due to his height and was responsible for many of Eastern's long gains. McCONNELL: Never played football in high school, but his natural ability and hard work made him one of the best ends in the state. He was a fine blocker and good interference.

CALDWELL: Injured most of season but showed his wares in the Homecoming game. He is a fast and deceptive runner. Threw one of the longest completed passes in intercollegiate football during his junior year.

FRESHMEN FOOTBALL

Though the 1937 Freshman football team may not have been the best in the history of this institution, it may certainly be said that they did their job and did it well. Toiling day after day with little praise and little glory the Frosh acted as "cannon fodder" for the varsity. The successful season enjoyed by the Varsity was due greatly to the unheralded labor of the Baby Maroons.

The Little Maroons played only one game this season after a brilliant battle were defeated by one of the best Frosh teams ever to represent Centre, 6 to 0.

Coached by "Turkey" Hughes, Capt. Hembree and O. King, the Frosh were rapidly molded into a fine unit. It is no little task to mold a team from high school players accustomed to various systems of play. Outstanding among the Little Maroons were George Ordich and "Spider" Thurman, a pair of triple-threat backs and Scott, a fine halfback. In the line, Tussey, Lewis, Saad, and Helton looked especially capable of developing into varsity material.

VARSITY BASKETBALL SQUAD

Shortly after the pigskin season was closed, Coach Rome Rankin issued the call for basketball candidates. His call was answered by one of the best teams in recent years. Only three veterans reported, Capt. Roy King, Otwell Rankin, and Ray Fritts. The remainder of the squad was composed of Sophomores and Junior college men.

The Maroons were the leaders of the eastern circuit of the K.I.A.C. They consistently defeated the basketeers of eastern Kentucky but could not cope with the tremendous height advantage of Western and Murray. Some revenge was gained for the "Hawg Rifle" defeat by two well-earned, decisive victories over Morehead's strong hardwood outfit.

The Maroons opened strong with a one-sided victory over Georgetown and won a hectic battle from Welseyan on foreign floors. An upset by Transy only spurred the Maroons further and they led the conference for weeks. Centre, Georgetown, More-head, and Wesleyan suffered double defeats at the hands of the Maroons, while Transy and Berea hit a .5000 average. The "Big Reds" also won a hard fought battle from U. of L. Our western Kentucky rivals, Western and Murray proved to be our remise and cost the Maroons their K.I.A.C. leadership.

Playing host to the K.I.A.C. tournament, the Maroons suffered a similar fate of a year ago and drew one of the favored teams. Murray won the opening contest, but only after the Maroons had played brilliant basketball the first half and tired in the last period due to the strain of staying with the stratospheric thoroughbreds. The Maroons chose to decline an invitation to the S.I.A.A. tournament at Bowling Green.

Coach Rankin and the Maroons rightfully deserved the support the student body, which incidentally has been the best in recent years. One of the bright lights of the season was the practically unanimous choice of Roy King on the All-Tournament Team.

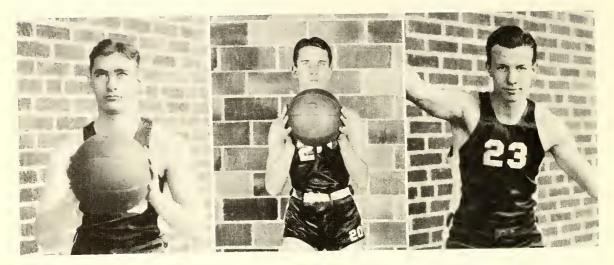

Capt. R. King, Guard

R. Fritts, Center

O. Rankin, Guard

KING: Captain King has been one of the most outstanding hardwood performers for the Maroons since the inception of the sport. An All K.I.A.C. guard and one who really deserves all the honor given him. FRITTS: A juinor college man who came to Eastern and made good in a big way. He was a powerhouse both on the defense and offense. A fine rebounder and a better than average pivot shot. A hard working fellow. RANKIN: Never a star performer but a consistent player who loved the game. Was a fine defensive man and a good floor shot. Seemed to know where to be on the floor at the right time.

The Big Maroons concluded one of the most successful basketball seasons ever played at Eastern, amassing a record of twelve won and six lost, four of the losers being to Western and Murray.

Coach Rome Rankin moulded a powerful aggregation from comparatively new material. He had only three experienced men from the previous year report for duty. He was fortunate in having excellent material from the Frosh squad to work with.

Roy King, Captain and stellar guard, for the past two seasons, played the same brilliant game throughout the season and was chosen in the all K. I. A. C. team, a due honor. Other seniors wro performed with precision were Ray Fritts and Otwell Rankin.

Next season should be even greater counting the experience of this season's sophomores and the fine freshman material coming up from this season's frosh squad.

Swindler, Thurman, Perry, Helton, Murrel, Ordich, Mgr. Hinkle, Ass't. Coach, Lewis, Fulton, Ahney, Scott, Gott, Hembree, Coach. Tussey, Day, Shetler.

FRESHMEN BASKETBALL

Eastern this year had the honor of being host to the finest Freshman basketball team ever to enroll at Richmond. The 1937-38 aggregation was probably the best Frosh team in the State. Suffering only one loss, that to the Transy Freshmen early in the season, the Baby Maroons consistently defeated every team on their schedule by handsome margins. The Little Maroons atoned for their early loss by decisively defeating the Transy team on the local floor.

The Baby Maroons were coached by Capt. Hembree and Woodrow Hinkle, former artist of the hardwood and an all K.I.A.C. forward in 35-36. The Varsity should be well bolstered next year with fine material from the Freshman ranks. Elmer Fulton, elongated forward, averaged 18 points per game. He was ably assisted in gathering markers by his running-mate "Peck" Perry, a sharpshooting lad from Dayton. Ora Tussey, a Portsmouth, Ohio, product, was both an offensive and defensive mainstay. Gott and Abney, former Berea stars excelled in their foot work. Helton, "the Camargo Express," fitted into the line-up with no less of polish whatever. All in all, the future looks exceedingly bright for the chances of a K.I.A.C. championship.

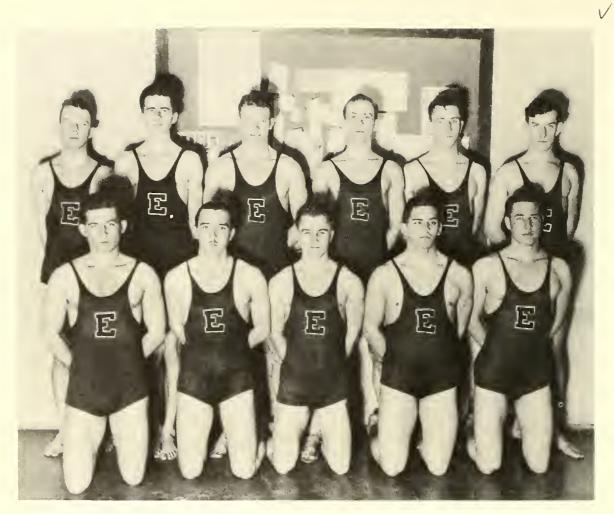

Rice, Merlino, Ramsey, Voshell, Kemp, Bryant. Shetler, Luman, Hill, Davidson, Parks, Williams. King, Cole, Fritts, Hinkle, Caldwell, Porter, Hembree, Coach.

BASEBALL

As the major part of the baseball season is underway as the Milestone is going to press, it is most difficult to give a resume of the season. However, in early games and practice sessions the diamond-dwellers look as though they will repeat the almost monotonous task of winning the K.I.A.C. championship. If so, the Hembree-men will cop their eighth consecutive victory of the conference pennant.

Coach G. N. Hembree had difficulties a'plenty in early season practice. Hinkle and Hines, experienced infielders were lost by ineligibility and a new ruling forbade the participation of Freshman in this field of sport. The latter ruling delays the career of Vernon "Lefty" Shetler for another year. Shetler is the best freshman prospect to enroll at this institution in many moons.

The nucleus of this year's team is built around James Caldwell, who plays almost any position and plays it well. "Jim" is a versatile athlete and plays for his genuine love of the game; Walter Hill and Leslie Voshell, outfielders; Roy King, Harry Bryant, and Lester King, veteran infielders; and Rice and Yeager, both have had previous experience and will share the mound duties.

Elder, Warner, Dickman, Weaver, Byar. Edwards, Whitehead, Hennessey, Hesser, McConnell, Roth.

SWIMMING

The Eastern mermen, true to expectations, developed into quite an improved team of natatorial artists to take second place in the State meet, thus meriting first in K.I.A.C. rating for the second consecutive year. In the state, the only loss was to the U. of Kentucky and in the southern trip the University of Tennessee ran up the largest number of points. In two meets against Berea, the Eastern tanksters ran up overwhelming scores.

Bob Dickman has maintained supremacy on the springboard in every meet and also excelled in the short dashes and as a relay man. Steve Edwards, (a senior), and Leslie Roth have worked together as inseparable back-strokers to outpoint their opponents. Bill Byar, (a senior), and Jim Hennessey, both football men, have scored consistently in the short dashes and held up their parts in the relays. Ed McConnell, (a senior), has been our strongest contender for the distance events with Jack Weaver, both football players, plodding away a few yards to the rear. Guy Whitehead shows promise of developing into a future point man in the back and breaststroke. Marshall Arbuckle, absent when the picture was made has been a constant threat on the springboard and in the breaststroke events. Joe Elder, out for the season due to head infection and Charles Warner, new distance man, should carry on next year.

Ed Hesser, (a senior), who has captained and coached the Eastern Swimming team for four years, will also be missed as fill-in man, having usually made up any vacancies which occured from year to year.

Denny, Barnes, Arbuckle, Childs. Whitaker, Bennett, Rechtin.

TENNIS TEAM

No track team had been organized at the time the Milestone went to press, so we honor Walter Hill, who has been a mainstay on the Maroon track team for the past three years. In last year's State Meet, Hill seored fifteen points and was among the top-notchers at the meet.

Candid and not so Candid

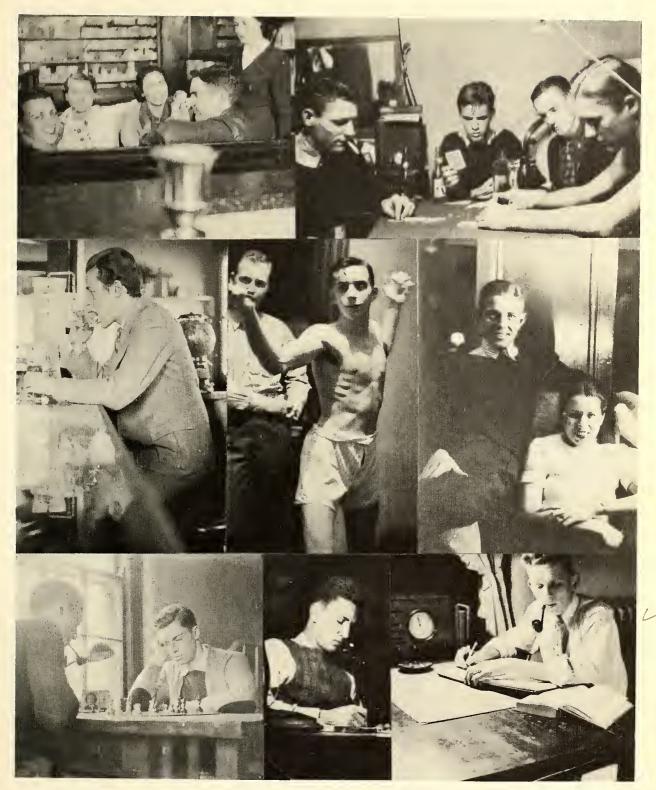

In the good old summer time, Doug. helps C. T. quench a thirst while Marg. "Juliet" Hubbard suns herself and "Buckles" plays tennis. Some of the students prefer the old fashion type of courtin' but the group in the lower corner prefer more strenuous relaxation.

Students pause on the campus and down town for conversation, but others get their books and attend elass. Rather than go to class, Rouse concentrates on spring training . . . and Doc., Wilson, and Carl concentrate on their fair companions.

We offer this page to prove that students do study. "Piney" prefers a book but Clyde plays Rook. Fu Man Chu Rankin pounds a typewriter . . . John and his roommate read of places to go and Dick Richards points them out on the map . . . Brock and Bryant read light literature and Norb. has refreshments to help him study.

We gather in drug stores, rooms and at Happy's to talk and eat . . . Russ demonstrates his ability with a long sword while Rich courts Frances . . . While Tarzan plans his next move, Ed writes a letter and Charles works his accounting.

Some students study at night while others sleep . . . Pris gets a letter from home . . . Doc. Kennamer takes his students on a field trip while the R.O.T.C. stays at home to clean the guns . . . Carl prepares to strike his inquisitive friends, but they, together with other girls and boys on the page, pose for a picture. Eddie goes to the top of a water tower to get his snapshots . . . and Edith and Jerry wait pensively for the hand . . . the character in the lower corner is Hunky Brock growing a heard and washing dishes.

Here we have a crowd of fair students gathered between Hitler Barnes and Napoleon Powers. The Richardson trio start an adagio while Katy cleans house and Ann plays in the snow . . . Bill and Jim pose in California while Carl and Virginia pose in the postoffice . . . We see Marshall's young friend giving the traditional freshman salute.

Personalities: Owens makes a phone call and Vic. Yates (office girl No. 1) looks up to answer it. Editor Maurer surveys his brain child . . . but Hunkey, Bonnie and Jim would rather eat . . . "Speed" and Ann pose for a close up . . . Lefty, Katy and Lois seem pleased but Charlie has that crafty look that tells us he has something up his sleeve.

The make-up room - - Toadvine acquires age for her part as the Nurse, in Romeo and Juliet.

Below: "My lord, I would that Thursday were tomorrow."— Scene from Romeo and Juliet.

Fourteen girls--pretty ones, too-present the year's first play with the Little Theatre Club's first all-girl cast. "Miss Eastern, 1937" (Opal Hanshaw) as Glee in Glee Plays the Game furnishes gayety, beauty, and heart interest; Alma Graham adding a dash of deviltry to the role of Bernice runs her a close second. Can any one forget Dorothy Dorris and Anne Osborne as the harassed sisters? Sue Toadvine's portrayal of Tabby and Helen Schorle's Natalie are general favorites. Applause . . . flowers . . . and the L. T. C. adds another success to its already long record.

Try-out night! Thirty-five apprchensive ncophytes applying make-up, wriggling into costumes. Mumbling half-remembered lines and praying that the gods- and the old members out front---will be kind.

ON THE STAGE

"For I never saw true beauty till tonight." The club's fourth Shakespearean play, Romeo and Juliet has packed the house—aisles filled with chairs—standers at the back —on the stage, a pair of star-crossed lovers bring new beauty to the world famous play. The sly roguery of Peter (John Hughes) and the rich, salty humor of the Nurse (Sue Toadvine) win general favor.

"A flower-in faith, a very flower" is Lord Paris (James Hart).

"Queen Mab has been with you . . . ah ha! your passado! . . . a plague on both your houses!"—and Mercutio (Owen Gribbin) well deserves the audience's hearty applause.

The page (James Brock) is actually standing quietly and seriously by his master! Must be the result of seeing big brother Hiram so dignified and austere a Prince Escalus.

"Hang, beg, starve, die in the street!"—Can this stern, relentless Capulet be our Charles Warner or his regal lady our Dorothy Dorris?

"Wisely and slowly"—what a splendid interpretation of Friar Lawrence is Leonard Stafford's thoughtful portrayal!

"Heaven is here where Juliet lives." The dainty beauty and sweet sincerity of Margaret Hubbard's Juliet give new truth to the words.

James Hart Editor, The Milestone

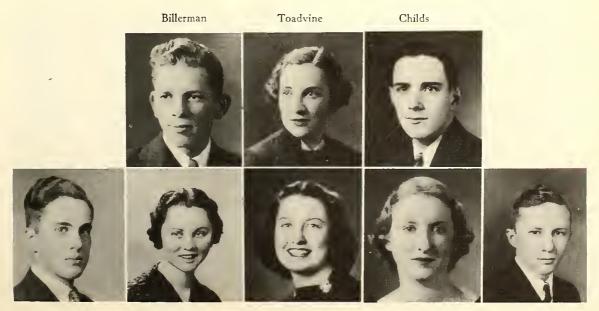

The staff of the 1938 MILESTONE has endeavored to give Eastern students a distinctive year-book. There are numerous changes and additional sections. Although not in all cases original, the ideas are new to an Eastern Milestone. First of all, we have broken the tradition of dark maroon covers, we have used "Off-set" printing, which is practically unknown in the field of college year-books, and the parody on the Esquire magazine is an entirely new feature. We hope the book meets with your approval.

The Senior Class Idols

recognized merits of a capable organizer. Through the years preceding the Senior Class days he was looked upon as a sage of wisdom in all affairs concerning the workings of a class, and at the same time, he maintained a choice position as a member of the varsity football squad. He carried on the duties of a football player in much the same manner that he portrayed the language of a gentleman and scholar -with perfection personified. He is one of the most popular young men on the campus at large. He will take with him the memories of a most successful year.

OTWELL RANKIN was elected second in command to McConnell. being vice-president of the class. He is just as superior in the managing of class activities as his President. He possesses a great deal of that willingness to put forth an effort at any cost. He has been active in student welfare work, and has always worked for the benefit of the student body. He was also given the honor of being president of the Student Relationship Council. He also carried on the duties of a varsity man in the fields of basketball, being an outstanding guard—he guarded the ideals of Eastern athletics just as he guarded the ball.

JERRY ALLEN the treasurer of the class is next in line of the senior class Idols, for it was her ingenuity in the handling of monetary affairs that made her an outstanding member of the class. She is a very charming person, she makes an impression with her sweet smile, take it from us, that is hard to look down. She has been an active person on the campus of Eastern, being a member of the Little Theatre Club and the Madrigal Club besides participating in other extra-curricular activities. Miss Allen will leave many friends on the campus.

FRANCES COCANOUGHER was elected secretary of the class. She could be a very charming person in any institution on this old globe of ours. She is quiet and pleasant in manner. She seems to be the pet of the senior class when it comes to getting results. Miss Cocanougher is also one of the members of the Student Relationship Council and the Dormitory Council. She is active in the field of education, being a member of the National Education Fraternity, Kappa Delta Pi. Her "ism's" we all know, witticism, criticism, and skepticism. Frances will always be remembered by her friends.

RALPH GARNETT MAURER is a native of Burlington, Kentucky. He has been connected with newspaper work, in all its different phases, for a number of years, in spite of his youthfulness in appearance, being editor of the County newspaper from where he came, for three years. He came to Eastern, where he took over the reins of the Eastern Progress, student bi-weekly, for a year and a half. At this time he was special correspondent from Madison County to the Lexington Leader. Some day he fully intends to write sports for some big daily newspaper, so his progress in the writing field will bear consistent watching. Ralph, while trying to decide on a way to find a good man to recommend for the editorship next year, decided on this plan. He took different members of his present staff and let them edit four papers. From these he has a pretty good idea who he will recommend to the President. Smart boy Ralph.

WILLIAM HAMILTON as his mother chose to call him, came to Madison County when he was a very small boy, and he has lived here ever since. Living in the land of blue grass, and amid a fine farming area, the background for the story, BETWEEN TWO THEIVES is a real one. The story concerning the trials of a man who was greatly influenced by the sins of his father. He saved his money for things unknown, even to himself, he became unknowingly a miser. At the close of the story, on his deathbed, he realizes that a woman is his only true friend so he leaves his belongings to her and the church to which he had become affiliated in the later years of his life. The title is derived from the story of Jcsus on the Cross, for just as the character in Hamilton's story dies, he asks the doctor and the lawyer, who have just charged him excessively for their services, to step one on each side of his bed, thus in his own imagination, he died as Jesus died, Between two Theives.

CLYDE JOSEPH LEWIS

was born in the land of the speedways, Indianapolis, Indiana. Possessed with the writing fever when he was a small boy he has written many lines of copy. At this time he has 50,000 words of typewritten material in his files. The story SHEEP IN THE MEADOW is the culmination of the thoughts that enter into the normal boy's mind when he thinks on the terribleness of the future wars that this country may participate in. Not having seen the goriness of actual battle, the story is purely imaginative in its views. When he writes, he writes because he feels the impulse, and it must, in his way of thinking, be satisfied. He has a rising ambition to write a novel. We all wish him the best of luck. The other night I walked in Lewis's room just after he had finished reading a rather prominent author's latest novel. His criticism of the book was so "professional" that I left rather than show my own ignorance as a critic.

WILLIAM BRIGHT, affectionately known on the campus as "Billy," is a native of Madison County. He comes from a long line of folks who have traversed the soils of this section of Kentucky from pioneer days to the age of the streamlined train; they have fought all the major wars that this country has participated in. Billy explains laughingly that he first wrote lines for the benefit of a small girl in pigtails who sat next to him in the first grade. Now he writes for the pure joy of writing, and not for the wooing of a lovely little girl in pigtails. After the winners of the poetry contest were announced Billy didn't even pester us for his prize money, much.

He likes to swim and take sun baths. He enjoys driving at a high rate of speed and trying to stop on the proverbial "d i m e." Confidentially, a certain co-ed let it slip, that he loves to have her run her fingers through his long, wavy black hair.

DEAD PAN ROME

The Man Who Has Given Eastern Teachers College Some Athletic Prestige

by RALPH GARNETT MAURER

- SPORT -

Back in 1934 at the close of Eastern's football season, a season which was disastrous from the standpoint of wins and losses, there were widespread rumors on the campus concerning a new coach. Of course after every fatal season there are such rumors, but in this age, small colleges change coaches as often as chorus girls change their panties, thus the rumor carried weight. It was the subject of conversation in all gatherings from the Ladies Aid Society to the drug store "brain session." These discussions and rumors were not critical of the present coaches; their tone was the cry for new blood in the saddle of Eastern athletics, especially in football.

It was Saturday afternoon, just before the Christmas holidays in 1934, when I learned that the rumors were true. The tip came to me in this manner: I was in a "we'll both talk and nobody listen" session with Robert Rankin, brother of Eastern's Dead Pan Rome. We had discussed subjects ranging from badminton to adolescent psychology, touching upon football and football coaches only lightly, when suddenly the Younger Rankin broke thru with the news that his brother was to be head football coach at Eastern in 1935.

I was held in strictest confidence as I was the only student other than Rankin to have the inside dope. The rumors kept flying some thought "Hunk" Anderson would get the call, some of the more conservatives had selected Paul Jenkins, of Ashland Tom Cat fame, and some few still thought there would be no change.

Bob Rankin and I heard these rumors. We listened intently and exchanged our hearings each evening, each suffering with that "innate desire"— to pass it on. We waited though until the news broke. It swept the campus faster than the news of a campus shotgun wedding gets from ear to tongue to ear. Then, instead of being a nervous wait for two students, it concerned several thousand Eastern football-loving followers.

The new coach, Jerome "Rome" Rankin was to enter upon his new duties February 1, 1935, and take charge of spring football practice.

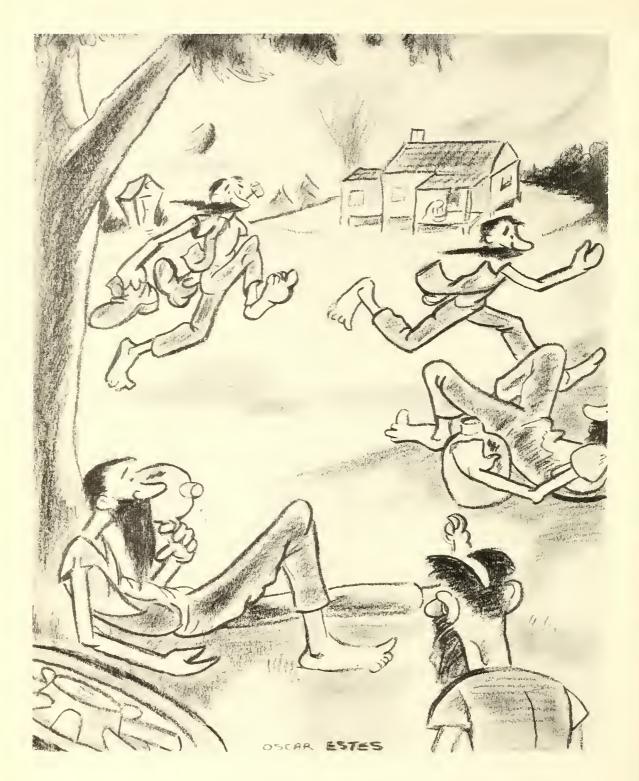

With the arrival of Rankin and a carload of huskies-huskies that made "giants" of our former teams appear as undernourished high school subs-it became evident that the days had past when the Eastern Maroons would return from the gridiron a crushed team. Every student saw a potential winner. Even the "bluebloods" and the remainder of Richmond Citizenry cast aside their Civil War society splurge (to the extent, as local surveys show, that the consumption of Mint Juleps and Bridge cards dropped 23.6 during the year) and learned a few pep-songs. Eastern was destined for a stratospheric hop in collegiate football. Rome Rankin was the man that could lead the Big Red from the Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference pits of darkness. His preparation and experience had marked him as a natural leader for the descending Easterners.

His prep-school work was done at Toledo's famed Scott High School from where he graduated in 1920. From here "Modest Rome Rankin" went to Waynesburg College where he marched under the flag of Orange and Black for four years. Records from the little Pennsylvania College show that "Eastern's Bernie Bierman" was not only a borderline-honor student but was one of the boys himself. He earned letters in football, basketball and baseball. On the gridiron Rankin handled himself in a manner that placed him on the allconference team. He also captained the basketball and baseball teams at Waynesburg, official team records show Knute Rockne, the czar of the gridiron, was doing great things about the time Rankin closed his undergraduate days. One of the things he was doing was conducting the Notre Dame coaching school so Young Rankin, fresh from his college glory days, entered the school, thus today when "Stuttering Monk" Everling or "Tiny" Milt Feinstein come out of the huddle, the boys lincup Notre Dame fashion. Besides holding a diploma from this school Rankin also holds a similar one from the University of Michigan.

TWO THIFVES

A Story with a Queer Twist but a Story to be Remembered

by RUSS HAMILTON

- FICTION -

It was the day for which Dan Grubbs had long awaited; the day marking the consummation of two vows, one to his dying mother, the other to himself.

He scarcely remembered his father, a drunken man staggering home, snarling at, and cursing his sad-faced, frail, little mother who had often told him how happy she and his father had begun married life. Counting it a joy to earn their earthly fortune by the sweat of their brows, how good health and willingness to work had made them owners of the well-stocked farm before Dan was born, that their happiness ended the day his father received a legacy--ten thousand dollars—from an uncle, that his father then ceased to make a living in the Scriptural way, "took to drink" and squandered the legacy, her happiness, and his health before he was stretched for his long last sleep-if not full of years-full of red whiskey.

She exacted the promise that Dan would eschew the "damnable stuff," a vow that was supplemented by one to himself, he would rehabilitate and restock the farm and lay up in cash another ten thousand dollars.

Dan bent every energy toward fulfilling the promises as the years passed. The first one made a recluse of him; he had eschemed the "damnable" at the sacrifice of society. The other, made him a miser, Dan little realizing either consequence. Couldn't he look society in the face and tell the awfulness of his seeming unsociability? Would society be appeased when he built a new house and invited it to see what he had accomplished by seclusion?

Instead, he was galloping toward town, digging spurs into the mule's side and lashing him unmercifully with a leather-thong whip. The galloping, spurring and lashing kept rhythmical harmony and tempo with the words he was repeat-"Now I lay me down to sleep,

"I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep . . .

As he passed, people gazed back at him, thinking him crazy. He was, temporarily so.

Into town he sped, jumping off his mule in a jiffy, he rushed into the court house. After a hasty consultation with the sheriff, both mounted steeds and galloped away.

A few miles out, they turned into a cornfield, dashing pell-mell through the rattling, dry blades of standing corn to Dan's shack in the center of the field. When they dismounted from the panting animals, Dan finished his story:

"I'd been shucking corn in the field all morning; coming home at noon for a snack. I found the lock broken, the door open and a thousand dollars gone." As they entered, he continued:

"You see that barrel behind my bed." The sheriff looked into the barrel of shelled corn. "I put a thousand dollars down under that corn yesterday, after I sold some hogs. I never dreamed anyone would think of looking there for money."

Again, the realization of his loss over-coming him, he began praying: "Oh Lordy, now I lay me down to sleep . .

"What the hell you mean?" queried the sheriff.

"My mother taught me to pray when trouble came; if loosing a thousand dollars ain't trouble, what do you call it?"

"Better be looking for the thief. Somebody knew the money was there, but why the hell do you keep money in this shack for? There are four banks in town!" exploded the sheriff.

"Maybe you think I can't keep money here." He was peeved at the sheriff's insinuation. "Now I'll show you something." He opened the grand-father clock and pulled up from its "hold" a bag. "A thousand dollars in that." He took down from the high mantel a cedar drum and took a bag out of it. "Another thousand in that!" In the corner of the room lifting the rag carpet, he took up a loose board and brought out another bag. "Another thousand in that." Then he kept on showing bags from odd, but careless hiding places, each containing "another thousand." "Gee whillikers," exploded the sheriff. "Man you're not hurt. Instead of snivelling you'd better be thanking your stars that all of it wasn't stolen.'

Then ensued a battle of words, cussable and uncussable. The sheriff trying to persuade the man to transfer the nine bags of money to the bank. He finally won.

There was never a solution to the theft. The theft and even Dan were soon forgotten by all. Cont. Page 181

SHEEP IN THE MEADOW

A Satire depicting the horrors of war, vividly portrayed

by CLYDE LEWIS

- SATIRE -

At three o'clock in the morning they crawled out into the dark. It had just stopped raining, and the Colonel shivered as he shook hands with the lieutenant. Then he went into his dugout, drank a glass of brandy and glared at little green pegs stuck in a map. There was one that he regarded intently. For awhile he sat musing, and then took it out and held it in his palm.

The Colonel and his staff had it all planned out. Fifteen men would present a false move from the center. Light artillery would open as if to cover. Twenty men would circle wide and attack on the flank. They would close swiftly, carry the nest with the bayonet and take a few prisoners for questioning. It was a carefully planned offensive, a credit to the military genius of the Colonel.

At three forty-five the two columns were making good progress when the white flarcs went up. A counter attacking force had crawled to within twenty-five yards of the twenty on the flank. They hurled their grenades, waited, and then began to pick off the survivors. Six managed to escape into the dark; they left their lieutenant hanging on a strand of barbed wire with both legs blown off. The other column got back with six killed and four wounded. At a quarter after four, when none of the flanking party had returned the artillery ceased firing. The surprise had been a complete failure, and the colonel was disgusted. He took another drink and jammed the green peg tack where it had been on the map. Then he went to bed.

Marino started to cough and stifled it. He lay for a moment, shaking, coughed again, and turned on his back. His white eychalls gleamed through the mist.

"The dirty . . . ," he croaked.

"The ... lice! I'll get the ... ha ha ... gchahch ... the dirty ..."

"Here!" whispered Levinson.

They inched forward on their bellies like crawling things. At each fresh burst of fire they glued themselves to earth. At each lull they started again. When they were all in the ditch, Levinson struck a match.

"Where?" he asked Marino.

The Italian tried to talk but only grinned, his face twisted into its usual Latin leer. A line of dark, wet blood ran from the corner of his mouth. He pointed to his chest.

"We ain't never gonna get outa this," muttered Downs. "Jesus! They're all around. How we gonna get back? Out there . . . we're lost. We're lost and every damned one of us knows it . . ."

"So what?" Elson said. He fumbled in his pockets. "Anybody got a cigarette?"

"You're trying to look brave," said Downs. "You're scared just like us. We're caught like rats. We're all going to die here in this . . . hole. Why is everybody so damned smug. Can't you get it? This ain't no party. We're gone this time . . ."

"Something will happen," said Hood. "You wait."

"I don't know," said Downs. "Maybe . . . "

"Look," said Hood. "They can't just let us stay out here . . ."

"They don't give a damn," said Downs. "They don't care. What are we. Just a bunch of damned fools..."

"Shut up," said Elson. "Can that stuff! You get on my nerves."

The firing had suddenly ceased. Levinson cocked his head to one side to listen.

"They're coming," he confided.

So far the kid hadn't said a word. Now he forced his lips apart as if they were compressed rubber.

"How do you know?" he asked. "You just know," said Levinson.

He spat and crouched on one knee, Cont. Page 183

THE DEVIL'S HENCHMAN

by BILLY BRIGHT

The devil has a henchman, I think I know his name; He comes a-sneakin' round at night A-playin' at his game.

He sees a quiet couple, A-spoonin' in the park; He shoots two rose-tipped arrows, At they, who're in the dark.

And Oh, the little devil, He loves to fix things up; I wish he'd go and take a jump The onery little pup.

years at Glenwood he won eighty percent of his games, even though he had few athletes from which to build a winner. During his reign at this little southcastern Ohio school, at which place (his boys— Killen, Everling, Jenkins, et al tell me) he was dead pan as ever, there were many tempting offers from the larger schools of the section, but they were refused for this one reason: "We're all just one hig family; let's stick together." (It is necessary to have been in the locker room just preceding a game to understand the quote).

After receiving lofty inducements from Eastern, Dead Pan Rome finally decided to step into the college ranks of the Bluegrass. First impressions of the new coach were sure to be pleasing because recommendations (involuntary) came in by the pages. E. E. Wiseman, formerly head coach at the University of Michigan and at present time line coach at Princeton, had this to say: "I know Mr. Rankin quite well, and I am convinced that he is not only a thorough student of physical education and athletics, but that he has the capacity to impart what he knows to others in an unusual degree . . .

E. D. Mitchell, director of the department of intramural athletics at the University of Michigan, sent the following in a letter of recommendation: "I do not recall that any student has ever shown more professional interest and enthusiasm. In addition to obtaining "A" grades in the class-work, he was always eager in pursuing any out of class projects which would contribute to his professional knowledge of physical education . .."

Hunk Anderson, formerly head coach at Notre Dame, was enthusiastic in his praise for Eastern's new man-at-the-wheel. "I remember Mr. Rankin very well, and think he is a high-type individual, and an exceptionally fine handler of men . . ."

Many other outstanding coaches and sports writers throughout the North and East poured praise on Eastern's new dead pan athletic find. To Eastern football fans he was not only a great coach but really a "name-coach." He was awaited and hailed with the enthusiasm equaled only by that which General Grant received when he returned to his home town of Galcna following the Civil War.

Since assuming his duties at Eastern, Rankin has fulfilled all expectations. He has given East-ern's "Big Red" something that they never before possessed -- athletic prestige. Not much, we admit, but nevertheless he has won more than seventy-five percent of his games as compared with a mere forty percent up until 1935. His teams since coming to Eastern have defeated Transylvania, something not accomplished in fifteen years previous, they defeated Georgetown in 1936 by a score of 6 to 2 after playing within the Baptist's thirty-yard stripe until the last few minutes of the game. In this game, which would have marked the Tiger's sixteenth consecutive win over Eastern, Dead Pan Rome's strategy called for a pass—Lund to Hatton. It clicked and Rankin was the man of the day.

Of course there have been defeats. Western, the team that heretofore used the Eastern game for a dual purpose—football fundamentals and track practice—admitted that their games with Rankin's teams during the past three years have been their toughest battles. Morehead's Eagles have been the thorn-in-the-side for Dead Pan Rome, but there is still a place for the "Hawg Rifle" in the foyer of Hiram Brock administration building and there are plenty of Rankin's huskies that swear by the ancestral D. Boone and others who lugged such "Hawg Rifles" that before another class graduates from Eastern the traditional antique will be among the exhibits.

Just what does Dead Pan Rome Rankin think of his accomplishments at Eastern? He admits none, so say the thirty-one Monastic-like creatures that live under his care in the stadium-dormitory. In fact, it appears that the young journalist who could get any such information from the coach should have a place awaiting him on the sports staff of the New York Times.

Regardless of what the Big Red pilot believes, Eastern sport-loving fans see advancements and see a future. To them, Dead Pan Rome Rankin is the "Allah" of Eastern athletics.

One person, Mrs. Crabtree, a tennant's wife on the farm sought him not for gain, but for his own good. She had an intuition that her appeal should seemingly be accidental, instead of intended, but she hadn't an idea how to make it so.

She trudged through the muddy field and found her victim cutting potatoes on his porch.

"Good day, neighbor," she greeted, "I see you are going to raise pertaters?"

"Looks so," cooly responded Dan, "Getting them ready to plant in the dark of the moon."

"I don't believe in this moon business," she stated.

"Mother planted in the dark of the moon and she always had a good turn out," he asserted.

The cue needed, his mother.

"Your mother was a pattern for all that is good. I am pleased that you are remembering her," she paused a moment, "Dan, your mother done something that you ain't never did."

Dan continued cutting potatoes into little bits, the more hurriedly, but apparently he was not curious to know just what Mrs. Crabtree had in mind.

"You've never darkened a church door since she died. Your mother always went to church." She toyed with the strings on her apron, more confused than Dan. "You know Dan, I love to believe that our loved ones are peepin' over the side of Heaven a'watchin' us. Wouldn't it please your mother to see you at Church?"

Having finished his task, Dan wiped his knife blade on his trousers, snapped it shut, drew his shirt sleeve across his tear-filled eyes, arose, and shouting over his shoulder, "Good evening, Mrs. Crabtree," went into his house.

Mrs. Crabtree recognized the dismissal. She went home sorrow-ful of her bungling.

Dan sat bowed, head in his hands a long time. When he arose from his position, he thought audibly, "The first one that has been here that hadn't an ax to grind. She had my interest in mind." The thought remained with him.

Sunday following, he sat, as he remembered it, in his mother's pew. Where, as a little shaver, he had sat with her. He listened with rapt interest to a sermon on The Crucifixion. He had never heard it before. It seemed that his mother sat beside him and was telling the story into his ear. When the invitation was extended to those who wanted to accept a savior's sacrificial death for their sins, Dan responded.

Months after he fell sick. Mrs. Crabtree nursed him. Diagnosis serious. Dan was advised to get ready for the inevitable. He sent for a lawyer and, as calmly as if he was planning a pleasure trip, told the lawyer the disposition he wanted made of his possessions. Then he asked the doctor the amount of his bill.

"Three hundred dollars."

"And yours?" to the lawyer.

"Five hundred dollars."

The will was written and handed to Dan, who signed it. The Doctor and Mrs. Crabtree witnessed it. "... and after payment of all debts, doctor, lawyer, and funeral expenses, I bequeath five thousand dollars to the Church, one thousand dollars to the pastor, and the balance of my property, real and personal, to Mrs. Hettie Crabtree." In a very feeble voice he requested the doctor to stand on one side of his bed, the lawyer on the other. Solemnly they moved to their places.

"Now," said Dan, "I can die as my savior died, between two thieves."

"We're after prisoners, too," Hood said. He tried to laugh. "That's a damned joke. Dog eat dog. Eat or be eat . . ."

Suddenly Downs threw up his rifle. His teeth were chattering as he squinted along the sights. "I saw one," he whispered hoarsely. "Crawling! I saw it over that way."

Elson grabbed him snarling, threw up the barrel. "Lay off that gun, you yellow . . . We don't know where they are. Wait till they're about twenty feet away. Shoot for their guts then you can't miss."

Levinson nodded, chewing on his ever present splinter. "Downs reminds me of a girl I had in Frisco. Afraid of this, afraid of that. Finally knifed the wrong guy in the dark."

"I just saw another one," said the kid.

"I hate this damned hide and seek stuff," Elson said. "Wait'll they come in close . . ."

The kid gulped and looked at the rusty foot of steel on the barrel of his rifle.

Levinson spat again. "That's best. It's quieter. Quicker. We got to keep quiet."

The kid shook his head. "I can't," he said.

They didn't answer.

"I can't kill a man that way."

Elson shrugged. "It's all the same."

"Not that way. I couldn't stand it that way."

"What'd he say?" asked Levinson

"Nothing," said Elson. "He didn't say nothing."

Levinson tapped him on the shoulder. "When they come, don't jab. Slash! You jab, you're off balance. Twist if you get a chance. You want to twist like this. That way they bleed."

"My God!" breathed the kid. "I think I'm a little sick."

"You'll be all right," said Elson. "I can't do it. I know I can't do it. Not like that. My God! It's awful . . . "

Downs laughed crazily. "You wait," he said. "You just wait 'til you see their faces."

"You'll be all right," said Elson again.

"How long you been up?" asked Hood.

"I was in college," said the kid. "They got me in the second draft. I was studying to be a doctor . . ."

"Now you're studying to be a murderer," said Downs. He leaned forward, his eyes dialated. "If you'd been a little older they'd let you try to patch us up. They'd blow hell out of us so you'd have plenty to do. But now you're just one of us. They're murdering men. It's the . . . captialists. That's what it is."

"Why is everybody so crazy? We drain our blood so the dirty . . . captialists can get fat. That's the way it is. That's the whole damned idea. And they got us out herc . . . We're lost and now we get slaughtered . . . That's your . . . whole idea in a . . . nutshell."

Hood was the first one to fire. There was a scream and a moan not ten yards away. Dark shapes, bent forward, came plodding out of the night.

Fire flashed from the gulley. Smoke curled up like a ghostly veil in the dark. Levinson fired coolly, deliberately, picking his marks. Downs cursing, fumbled with his breech hetween shots. Hood chewed furiously at his tobacco and some of the juice trickled into his beard. Elson only fired twice. Then he leaned forward his shinney knuckles white as they clutched the gun.

Men in square steel hats were at the top of the shell hole. One of them with a pistol stood back and calmly began to fire. The first two Marino, dying in the water, had suddenly sat up, cursing in Italian. Through thin lips his strong white teeth flashed as he fumbled with his rifle. He fired without aiming, Then stopped to cough. The officer with the revolver tried to find him in the dark; his bullets ripped into the mud. Marino raised the rifle again, managed to throw out the shell, squeezed the trigger as bullets hit his shoulder and grazed his cheek. The officer threw up his arms, sank to his knees, grabbed at his abdomen.

Elson tried to turn but slipped when his heavy shoe twisted on the face of the man he had shot. Steel entered his side and came out his back.

Levinson met his man cleanly, driving him back. Another lunged but fell on the kid's bayonet. He writhed like a worm on a hook, gasped and screamed, so that suddenly the kid was tearing, ripping, to get free. Men were all around him. They were showing yellow fangs and twisting cold knives. He saw Levinson and leaped forward like an animal, jabbing and slashing at the shapes before him. Ages later he found himself sobbing as he drove the long bayonet again and again into a lifeless, quivering body.

They clambered out of the death hole into the gray of early morning. They slouched along like the hunted with their bodies bent low ready to drop. After a quarter of a mile it began to grow light.

A shell burst somewhere in front of them. It was followed by another, they hugged the cold mud and tried to shout above the whine of the shells.

Levinson raised his head and sniffed. Almost at once he coughed and began to fumble with his mask. Mechanically the kid unslung the mask from about his neck, but it fell apart in his hand. His own coughing drew his eyes away from the tube which had been slashed through in two places. As if in a far away haze he saw the grotesque animal-like form that was Levinson adjusting his mask.

There were already needles in his chest, and on his chest was a great, white hot weight. The kid stood here in the jagged hole of hell, swaying as he whispered to himself:

"Now I must die—for there is gas and I have no mask . . . If I had a mask . . . If I only had a mask I could breathe but . . . Oh God! I am really going to die . . . but I can't die . . . but I going to . . . No . . . No . . . This is a dream . . . It is too strange . . . I never saw this place before . . . this is a dream . . . Oh God! Surely this cannot be .."

He began to cough. His hands found their way to his throat and clamped there. For one brief choking instant he stood, and then like some crazed machine raised his rifle. At the shot Levinson stiffened, straightened, turned, and tried to club his gun, but he was too weak. The kid fired again.

As he worked with Levinson's mask, he was jabbering through the tears that ran in crusted grime over his cheeks. But when he raised it there were two neat holes in the air tube. For a moment he stared like a striken ox. Levinson was lying on his back, grinning up at him in death.

"I can't die," he croaked. "I'm too young to die . . . But I'm going to . . . I have to . . ."

"Oh this gas . . . Oh God . . . This is all . . . Now it is over . . . Oh but it can't be . . . There are so many things . . . Dr. Gray's adam's apple . . . it jumps on a string . . . I was worrying about my notebook . . . These things are real . . . The rest is a dream . . . I shall wake up . . . I must wake up . . . I must breathe . . . I must have air to live . . . This is not real . . . I am not alone . . . I cannot die here . . . But I won't . . . I can't . . . Marie, I won't . . . I won't . . . Mother . . . but I must . . . I must . . . I cannot but I will . . . but I can't . . ."

He struggled to the rim of the shell hole and stood poised on the brink. There was a great rumbling in his ears; his eyes bulged like glass marbles over the puffed purple of the cheeks. His hands clung to his throat like twin clamps.

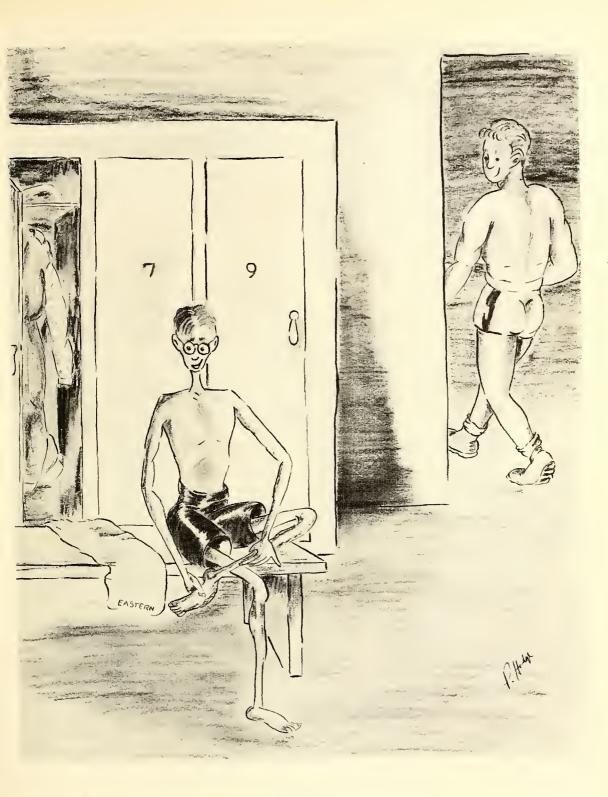

And in the fleeting seconds, the blinding, choking, speeding seconds, the kid sank to his knees and thought . . . and dreamed.

That morning the sun came out red over the world and drove away the mists of dawn. It was the same sun over the same world, the same red, the same mist. The same unchanging sun, flooding everything with mellowness and light, lending to the warm soft notes of church organs, smiling through stained windows on people bowed in varnished benches. It was the herald of familiar things, the only reality in an existence of shame, and it smiled its genial warmth upon the world, saying to a mother across the tossing tides of the Atlantic:

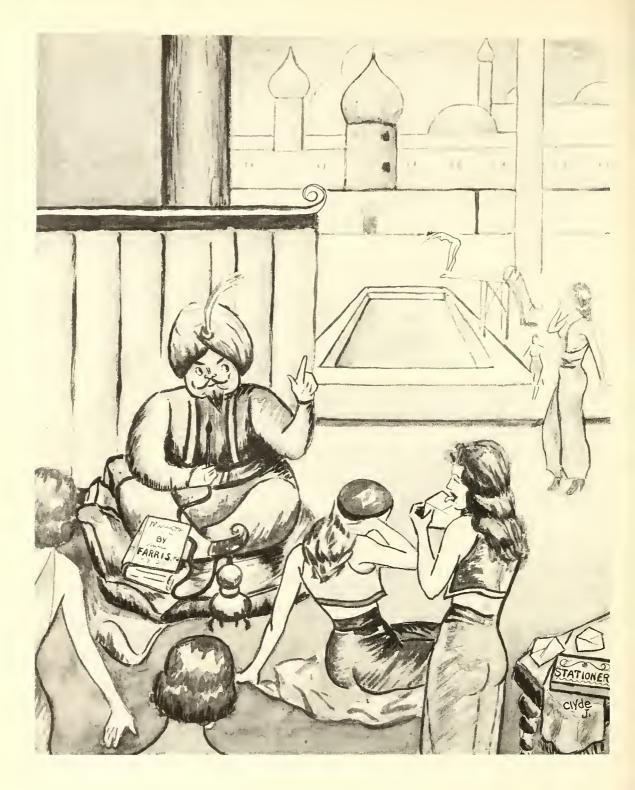

"Forget him, for he is no more. Forget that you bore him and washed him and cleaned him. Forget what he liked to eat. Forget how the boy laughed. Forget what made him ill. Forget what made him happy. Forget how he called your name. Forget all of these things for they are over. Forget his future for there is no future. Forget all of your dreams. Tear up the roots of this tree in your heart and fill up the hole that it left. Turn your face to other things and build a new life to replace all that you had. For things that are gone are gone, and those things must be forgotten."

And the sun that was red, a ball of fire driving away the cold mists of dawn over hell, looked down on him and said nothing, for there was nothing to say. From dust he had returned, and the way between was but little. What had been a man was a bulk of matter and blood wrapped in stained khaki. This was once a mother's son; this was once a student of books; this is now a pile of war manure, rotting where it fell in the mire of hell meadow.

The sun was silent and said nothing.

McGaughey's Studio

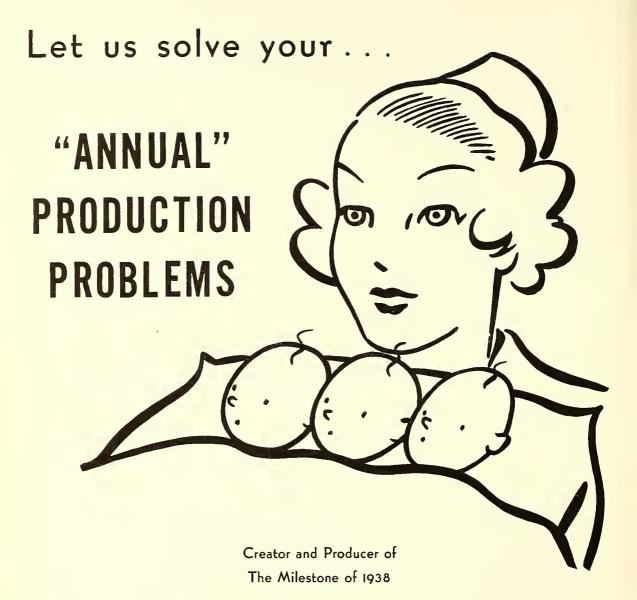

SINCE the beauty of an annual depends largely upon the quality of the photographs used, the Milestone Staff realize that a great part of whatever recognition this book merits should go to the McGaughey Studio. On the basis of satisfactory and efficient service, we recommend this studio to future Milestone Staffs.

Application photographs from any negative in our files may be had at any time for one dollar per dozen.
